LURID STORY.

Of An Alleged Tragedy in Our Sister County Across the River.

The following bloody tale from the Huntington Dispatch may be true, but we are very much disposed to doubt it. A fatal affray may have occurred, or only a cutting scrape without serious results; but we wager that the following blood-curdling account is strongly overdrawn.

The Dispatch is given to this sort of thing. Its columns teem with harrowing stories located on the "wild and woolly Big Sandy" and the heathenish counties of Wayne, Mingo and Logan.

It strikes us that the business men of Huntington should take steps to muzzle the snake and murder editors employed on their newspapers. Without the trade of this uncivilized section of country Huntington would be less prosperous than she is today. After being held up to the gaze of the world in the manner portrayed through these false articles our people do not feel like going to Huntington.

Here is the story:

"With his body literally perforated with great knife wounds, Ebenezer Maynard fell, gasping out his life at the feet of his one-time neighbor and friend, Andrew Fry, at East Lynn, Monday night, and the bloodiest stabbing affray in the history of Wayne county had been consummated.

The two had been together to an entertainment in the neighborhood and were on their way home when a quarrel arose before Maynard, who was one of the most prominent and wealthy merchants at East Lynn, could make any move to defuse the conflict. Fry had jerked an ugly knife from his pocket and literally cut Maynard to death.

The victim was cut into shreds—his face, neck and body presented one mass of ripe and gaping wounds, a sight to sicken any who looked upon him after the terrible affray. What caused Fry to wreak such a horrible revenge on Maynard is not known, unless he had been drinking and some slight insult wrought him into a frenzy.

Twenty stab wounds were counted in the victim's body, twelve of them being entirely through the point of the knife coming out through the back. Almost any one of the cuts would have been fatal. Maynard's eyes were cut out, his face ripped to shreds, exposing the teeth from side to skin, while his throat was split and his ears ripped into sections. The case has no parallel for utter brutality in the criminal annals of that county.

For years Maynard and Andrew Fry had lived with 400 yards of each other, being the best of friends and neighbors, frequently visiting at each other's home.

The victim and the murderer were well known in this city, where they often came on business. Each is the father of a large family. Feeling is intense in that section of the country over the deed that robbed Wayne county of one of its well known and prosperous citizens.

Both men have large followings, but it is believed there will be no trouble and that the law will be allowed to take its course. Fry has been arrested and placed in jail."

Mrs. Roberts Entertains.

Thursday afternoon is looked forward to by the ladies of the Elkhorn Club with delightful anticipation, and those who are fortunate enough to be present at the weekly diversions are never disappointed. There was nothing lacking at the beautiful Roberts' home last Thursday from 1 to 5 for all present, and the unfortunate absent ones were there in spirit.

Bishop J. J. Tigert.

This distinguished Methodist cleric, recently elected President of the recent Southern Methodist Quadrangular Conference, was in Louisville attending upon the Southern Methodist Conference some years ago, and preached a magnificent sermon.

A freight train had a wreck Monday afternoon, between Cliff and Auxier. The track was blocked for quite a while, and passenger train No. 30 due here at 4:15 p. m., was delayed until near 7 o'clock.

Reward of Merit.

W. T. Kane, one of the most intelligent and enterprising farmers in Kentucky, one who believes that well directed efforts in agriculture, backed by sense and industry will win, determined to compete with, not the farmers of his county and State alone, but with all comers, as the pugilists say, at the big St. Louis Fair. To this end he prepared his oats and beans, his peas and his grass and his wheat, and at the right time samples of these products of the Big Sandy were duly displayed along with the same sort of stuff from the richer valleys and the more fertile fields and pastures of other sections. The NEWS has no means of knowing if Mr. Kane even hoped, much less ever believed, that his display would be a winner, but it was. For this display he was awarded a handsome commemorative diploma in Imperial Japanese paper, 21 by 21 inches in size, and a silver medal, weighing about three and one-half ounces, struck by the United States mint in Philadelphia.

In the composition of the obverse of the medal are shown two figures, one of which, Columbia, tall and stately, is about to envelop the youthful maiden by her side, typifying the Louisiana Territory, in the flag of the stars and stripes, thus receiving her into the sisterhood of states. The other figure is depicted in the act of divesting herself of the cloak of Napoleon, the busy bee, emblem of the railroad. In the background is shown the rising sun, the dawn of a new era of progress to the nation.

The reverse of the medal shows an architectural tablet bearing an inscription giving the grade of the medal. Below the tablet are two dolphins symbolizing our eastern and western boundaries, the whole surrounded by an American Eagle, spreading his wings from ocean to ocean.

Will Repair Roads.

Supervisor of Roads E. J. Moore says that he will use the road machine to repair the worst places on main roads of the county. This is as much as he can do under the present state of finances. He has been building a new road near Girl Moore's and will begin work at once on the road from Blaine to Luskton. Except for a few bad places this road is in good condition, but a road is no better than the worst place in it as far as a loaded wagon is concerned. The wagon must be loaded so that it can get over the worst place in the road.

There Came a Snow.

Twelve years ago last Sunday, May 20, 1894, and it was Sunday, too, the people of Louisa and vicinity awoke to find four inches of very welcome and mighty wet snow lying on the land. Not since then have we had so late a snowfall. It was a destructive one, causing great loss and inconvenience.

Decoration Day.

This annually recurring day of tender memories and sad recollection will have come and gone when next this paper sees the light. It is very meet that on this day of the beautiful springtime we should go to the resting places of the loved and lost ones, and there, with the richest and the rarest, garland the graves of our dead. Thus do we pay the sweetest possible tribute to the memory of the panting babe, the dear parent, the loved child, or the fond companion who went out forever from our homes but not from our hearts. Shed no tears on these grassy mounds. Call not dead these who sleep beneath the verdant covering, but think of them as happy dwellers in a home somewhere beyond the blue.

Dr. Banfield at Cattellburg.

Dr. A. P. Banfield finds it necessary to increase his time in his Cattellburg office to three days per week. He will hereafter be there on Monday, Tuesday and Friday of each week. On other days he will be at Buchanan. Dr. Banfield has a very large practice, due to his successful treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat.

THE ROAD MEETING.

National Organizer Did Not Reach Louisa in Time.

The good roads meeting called for last Friday evening at the courthouse did not materialize because Mr. Loucks, the national organizer, could not reach here in time. A telegram was received in the afternoon stating that it would be impossible for him to fill the appointment and that a later date would be named.

He was at Wheeling instead of Williamson and could not make connection. Unless the cost of a convention should be greater than can be met, it will be arranged to hold one here some time after the visit of Mr. Loucks. The meeting with him will simply be for the purpose of estimating the cost and deciding how to meet it.

Another Kick on the C. & O.

We have been appealed to by the people in the vicinity of Zelena and Curnutt stations to call attention vigorously to the great inconvenience to which they have been subjected by the C. & O. railroad. Last September the railroad took out a county bridge crossing the creek between the two stations and no bridge or fill has yet been made there. The people are forced to ride or drive up the creek's long distance in order to find a crossing place. The distance they are compelled to go out of the way is a mile and a quarter.

The attention of the county officials as well as the railroad people is respectfully called to this matter and speedy action is asked for. No reasonable excuse can be offered for allowing this condition to prevail for such a long time. The railroad company should consider that the people of that neighborhood and others who are compelled to travel that road are very much inconvenienced, and are entitled to have their road replaced just as soon as possible.

Camp Gossip.

Tired of being "entitled, cabin'd and confined," pining for space would find room for their powers and parts of speech, our friends, the Gossips, have betaken themselves to fresher fields and pastures new. In other words they have gone into camp, and the birds and the bugs, the frogs and the flowers are their willing associates. Out on the Burns' farm the Caneys and Vines, the Bends, Burcheats and Burns', are in a comfortable house for use when it rains, but they are mostly out of doors. And they are certainly enjoying the outing. They have all the facilities and accompaniments. Hammocks and hammocks; chickens and chigglers; sand and sandwiches; bugs and berries, milk and mosquitoes, constitute the menu. Messrs. Vinson, Carey and Bond walk in and out every day and say they enjoy it. Visitors to camp are numerous and are especially entertained.

No Escapèl

Notice is hereby served on all young men to whom these presents may come, that if you come to Louisa or its vicinity and stay forty-eight hours you will capitulate to the gifts and graces of our dainty femininity. There is no escape. Look at the (very) civil engineers who have in times past found residence here. What became of them? Ask the preachers and the—ah—doctors!

And now comes the bridge force. Pea here two months, and two of 'em have surrendered. The latest—we don't say last, mind you, the latest is W. S. Morton, who was married to Miss Little Massie, of Hubbardstown, last week. And there are others!

Citizens Won.

The suit brought by a number of citizens of Fort Gay and vicinity against the Hastings Industrial Company of Chicago was decided in favor of the citizens. The suit involved a number of notes given for stock in the creamery at Fort Gay. The makers of the notes alleged misrepresentation as to the amount of stock being sold.

Ralph A. Heller.

The death of R. A. Heller, which occurred at his home in Pikeville last Sunday, was a distinct loss to the Sandy Valley. Coming to Kentucky and to Pike county about 12 years ago an entire stranger and a poor man, he had grown to be one of the foremost men in Eastern Kentucky and was possessed of a handsome fortune. His prominence was attained by remarkable business capacity, by industrious industry and strict personal integrity. Mr. Heller's foresight enabled him to realize what almost boundless wealth lay locked in the mountains of his adopted home and he was not slow to put on its feet a company now known almost everywhere American capital may be found; a company owning indisputably one of the largest tracts of coal in a single body in the world. Of this corporation he was the general manager, and to his prudence, sense and business skill are largely due its strength and possibilities.

Mr. Heller married a daughter of Norton and Norton are now connected by a line 283 miles long, but appearances are coming by this marriage allied to that a short cut along the south branch of the Big Sandy river is to be taken by the Pennsylvania. Such was the father of two bright boys. He a black would tap virgin coal and timber lands. This territory would thus have a direct line to Atlanta, Pensacola and New Orleans, while through the Norfolk and Western, Keova and probably some complications.

It was intended that Mr. Heller should be buried in Pikeville, but preparations were made accordingly, but a telegram was received from his mother in Bangor, Maine, requesting that the body be sent there for interment. A special train was sent from Ashland Wednesday morning, and in the afternoon the remains, accompanied by the widow and some others, were carried to Ashland and sent East over the C. & O.

Mr. Heller was born in Bangor and was about 40 years of age.

Capt. Hiram Tyler.

The old boatman spoken of below was well known to Sandians. He and his "Oil Hunter" were familiar features on this river 40 years ago.

"Capt. Hiram Tyler, who makes his home with Charles Likens, the grocer, on North Fifth street, was a visitor to the river front today. Captain Tyler is a veteran steamboatman, and, despite his age, 88 years, says he has faith that he can run a steamboat yet. He holds a pilot, captain and mate's license, and during his earlier days has owned several boats. He is a genius of an old fellow, just recently making a tricycle for himself to get around in. Captain Tyler is blessed with good eyesight, but it is a great comfort for him to get down to the river to look at the grand old stream.—Lebanon Register.

Big Sandy News Was the First.

People and institutions in the Stock are proverbially slow, but it should not be so in such a favored land. The Clarion is justly proud of the fact that it was the second weekly newspaper south of the Ohio river to establish a Mergenthaler type-setting machine. Even though the South is behind, it should not remain so. Let us have thrift.—Hawesville Clarion.

Result of Examination.

During the examination of applicants for teacher's certificates which was held here last Friday and Saturday forty persons presented themselves. Of this number ten obtained first-class certificates, twelve received second-class, eleven third-class, five failed utterly, and two withdrew.

More of the Same Kind.

The NEWS office was visited by a delegation of the Moores Tuesday evening on the very important mission of paying their subscriptions in advance. They were Ell, Mart and Freet, whom the country has no better citizens. They are prosperous genial men. Would that there were more and more of their kind.

Matthew Kitchen, of Osie, this county, who is in the U. S. Army, is at home on a three months' furlough. He is now a non-commissioned officer, and is stationed at Fort Adams, R. I.

Don't forget that next Wednesday, May 30, is Decoration Day, a legal holiday, and the banks will be closed.

RAILROAD.

Along the "South Branch of the Big Sandy River.

The following from the Huntington Herald appears to be somewhat mixed or indefinite, but we reproduce for what it may be worth:

A report emanating from the extreme western part of Virginia, where surveying parties are at work, is that the Pennsylvania, through the Baltimore and Ohio and Louisville, is to secure a southern outlet by building a link of about two hundred miles from Kenova, W. Va., to Norton, Va. Kenova is the southern terminus of the Ohio River division of the Baltimore and Ohio. Norton is the easterly, and, in that section, the northerly terminus of the Louisville and Nashville's Cumberland Valley division. Through the Norfolk and Western, Keova and probably some complications.

It was intended that Mr. Heller should be buried in Pikeville. Such terminals on the gulf would enhance the road's position for a long haul of material for the Panama canal and would also be a traffic outlet from large tonnage centers when the canal is ready for business.

Little Miss Ethel Clinton, aged 12 years, ran away from her mother at Springfield, Ohio, and came to her father M. V. Clinton, this city, whom she had not seen for eight years arriving Friday. Of course she didn't know him nor he didn't recognize her but she hunted him up and is now happy at her father's home.

Dr. Z. A. Thompson has moved his office from the "Iron Clad" on Second street, to the rooms over Plinson & Thorburn's store on Main street opposite the court house, which he has rented from J. E. Yost. The doctor has three splendid rooms with sky light for the operating room. The first room is the reception room, the second the operating room and the third, the drug department. The office is reached by an easy outside stairway and it is the best office location in the city.

Mrs. Francis Sturgill, a good old lady, the mother of Mrs. Will Cravens, died at her home on Mr. and Mrs. Cavens, near town Friday morning. The remains were buried Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Sturgill was from 65 to 70 years old. Her exact age was not known. Her funeral was preached by Rev. M. C. Reynolds of the M. E. Church.

The forest fires in Northern Michigan have almost swept blank an area of 100 square miles. So far as known only four lives have been lost. It is impossible to tell at present what the property loss will be, but it is very heavy. Four towns have been wiped off the map, a dozen partly destroyed and five counties devastated by the flames.

Forty-four prisoners were sentenced in the United States Court at Loandon Friday and filled the jail so completely that it was necessary to transfer fifteen to Mt. Vernon.

Owingsville, Ky.—John Williams, white, twenty-four years, was given one year in the penitentiary. Williams boarded a train on the Licking Valley railroad and, with a pistol in each hand, forced all the train crew and passengers to get off, and then took the train to the end of the road.

During the hearing of habeas corpus proceedings at Alexandria, a clash occurred when an effort was made to swear Judge A. S. Berry off the bench. Three attorneys were sued for contempt, but refused to pay, and announced that they would not be intimidated.

Frankfort, Ky., May 19.—Arrangements for the laying of the corner stone of the new Capitol have been completed by the local committee. Following the arrival of a special train from Louisville on the morning of June 16, which train will bear a number of distinguished Kentuckians and former residents of the State, Gov. Beckham will speak and lay the corner stone. Secretary of State McCloskey, is also down for a speech, and some distinguished ex-Kentuckians will be on the programme. Special invitations will be sent to former Governors J. Proctor Knott, S. B. Buckner, J. B. McCreary and William O. Bradley to be present on the occasion.

Washington, May 18.—William E. Chandler is likely to be out of a job soon. Since his emunication to Senator Tillman upholding the latter's version of the affair between himself and the President, the White House has displayed considerable interest in Mr. Chandler's official position.

Investigations have been made and it has been suddenly discovered that the Spanish treaty commission of which Mr. Chandler is the head, is not doing work enough to justify its existence. Hence the President's friends say that the stern and vigilant devotion to the interests of the public which has always characterized the Administration requires that the commission should cease to exist. Why it was never discovered before that the job was a sinecure is not explained. Everybody outside the White House and the Capitol has known it for a long time. However, it is stated that a careful examination shows for the nomination of Auditor Hager, who is about forty-five years of age and popular, but not so formidable a man as Senator Blackburn.

The latter is and always was popular in Kentucky, and would probably have been elected Senator had he got into the fight in the State. Instead he relied on his friends and the people of Kentucky to support him. They failed to do so, and he was defeated.

Cross-Ties Purchased During 1905

Probably no product of the forest has been the subject of more discussion and diversity of opinion than the annual consumption of cross-ties in the United States.

The following statements are made possible by the almost unanimous cooperation of the steam railroads with the Forest Service in furnishing the necessary data. While these statements are nearly complete for the purchases of ties by steam transportation companies, they are below the total number of cross-ties now, since no reports from electric roads are included. The figures given are based upon reports from 750 companies, hurling an aggregate trackage of 278,262 miles. Since, according to Pox's Manual for 1905, the total trackage of the railroads in the United States is 293,937 miles, it follows that the mileage reported is 95 per cent of the total. Switch ties have been figured into the equivalent number of cross-ties.

The total number of ties reported is $9,651,000, of which 22,569,000, or 36 per cent, were to be used for the construction of new track.

On this basis the total number of ties used by the steam railroads would be 81,000,000, representing nearly 3,000,000,000 feet of lumber board measure.

Of this immense number more than 47 per cent were of oak, the next greater being of pine. Of the oak 54 per cent came from the Central States, including Kentucky.

Preservative treatment was given to 7,415,000 ties, representing nearly 10 per cent of the total number reported. Although the species of timber treated have not been separated in most cases, it is safe to say that almost all of the ties treated were softwoods.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs of the kidneys themselves, break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles most always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and sealding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its well-known cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both Home of Swamp-Root sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention sending this generous offer in this paper.

HOME COMING.

Beautiful Proclamation Issued by Kentucky's Governor.

Following is Governor Beckman's Home Coming proclamation:

Commonwealth of Kentucky, Executive Department, Frankfort.—To all absent sons and daughters of Kentucky into whose homes these presents shall come, greeting:

As the fond parent yearns for the return of an absent child, so looth your mother Commonwealth rejoice in the prospect of bringing you back, even for a visit, to the Old Kentucky Home. Wherever you have wandered, late whatever lands or climes you may have gone to take up your abode, you are now by parental authority summoned back to the proud old State that gave birth to you or to your forefathers. The old drawed horn, that in days of yore tolled you of the approaching meal has been taken down from the wall and there issues from its sonorous and hospitable mouth a trumpet call reaching the remotest corners of the earth, and breathing into the ear of every honest Kentucky the imperial and irrepressible appeal that he drop all else and forthwith begin his pilgrimage back to his native hearth. A joyous welcome awaits you; feasts and festivities have been prepared to gladden your hearts; bugles and barbecues will awaken old and delightful memories in you; music and song, in sweetest strains, will cheer and comfort you; oratory and speech in eloquent terms will regale to you the lore which your old State bears for you and the interest and pride she has taken in your success in other lands. At the genial time of spring warme into life the beauties of nature, so will the kindly glances and friendly grasps of your old friends in Kentucky inspire in you. If possible, a greater and tenderer love for the State you once left. Peace and plenty shall be yours, and hardened, indeed, must be the heart that resists such an invitation and parental appeal. "God's Country" in June will put on her liveliest garb for you, nature will wear, as she can wear only in Kentucky, her brightest wreath of flowers and smiles, the feathered songsters will gaily sing in the musical celebration, green lawns, shady woodlands, rolling hillsides and pictoresque streams will in glorious and gorgeous style bespeak the welcome which thrills every heart.

We have this great event for your coming in Louisville from June 16 to 17; thence you may ramble into all parts of the State, where equally hospitable welcome will be given you.

Now therefore, vs Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, I, J. C. W. Beckman, do by these presents and by the authority of the parent which Kentucky claims over all her children, even unto the third and fourth generations, commanding each and every Kentuckian, whether separated from us by Imaginary State lines or broad seas, to come back home; if he be at the plow, the forge, the carpenter-room, the business office or in whatever employment, let him for the time close his work and return home. Men, women and children, who possess the priceless privilege of having a drop of Kentucky blood in their veins, must obey these commands and fail not to be with us necessary to lassoo any commands to during the gala periods. It is not the treatment of the guests, for the former are naxxan beyond measure to show them that the old Kentucky home is just as good now as it ever was.

Done at Frankfort this 9th day of May, 1906, and in the 111th year of the Commonwealth.

Railroad Rate Bill.

The principal purpose of the Railroad Rate Bill is to permit the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rates. The provision transferring this authority is found in the fourth section of the bill, which amends Section 15 of the interstate commerce law so as to accomplish this result. The section directs the commission, "to investigate complaints of unjust and unreasonable charges on the part of common carriers in the transportation or of practices affecting such charges. It also authorizes action to inquire as to whether the rates or practices are unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial or otherwise in violation of the act and in case any of these conditions are found to exist the commission is empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable maximum rate and what regulation or practice is just, reasonable and fair. Further, authority is given the commission to enforce its orders and they are to go into effect within thirty days and continue in force for two years unless suspended, modified or set aside by the commission or by a court of competent jurisdiction. Other powers conferred by this section are to apportion joint fares, establish through routes and maximum point rates and prescribe the commission to enforce its orders by giving service for carriers."

Interstate Commerce Commission shall fix maximum rate to be charged where complaint were made.

These rates, so fixed may be reviewed to fullest extent by courts.

Before rate can be suspended interlocutory decree notice of five days and hearing before three judges necessary.

Rate fixed and passed open goes into effect within 30 days, and may remain in force for two years.

Commission may fix joint through rates and part rail and part water rates.

Commission to consist of five members, as at present.

Railroad and carriers are prohibited from dealing in commodities sherry.

Pipe lines, private car lines, express companies and palace car companies are made common carriers.

Rates are punished by injunction to either party or firms of $1,000 to $20,000.

A person soliciting or expelling a rebate may also be fined three times the amount of the rebate.

Railroads must keep uniform sets of books, accessible to counsel, at all times.

Railroads must also make uniform reports.

Giving of Interstate passes except in stated cases prohibited.

Commission may compel switch and siding connectives.

FRIDAY, May 25, 1906.

Senator Blackburn is being suggested as a probable candidate for Governor of Kentucky.

Former Gov. W. O. Bradley, in an interview given at Cincinnati says he will not be a candidate for Congress from the Fifth Kentucky district.

A report from New York says that J. P. Morgan has "gobbled up" the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton R. R., and the bridge that was under construction across the Ohio river at Ashland. This probably kills the chance for another railroad line in the Big Sandy Valley, and keeps us at the mercy of one corporation with high freight rates.

If anybody should ask you, you may tell them that the time is drawing near when Carter county will have to erect some public buildings. The court house is absolutely dangerous and a glance at the jail on the north side shows it to be in no better condition. The clerk's offices are in no better condition. The clerk's offices are far too small in which to properly conduct the fast growing business of the county.—Grayson Herald.

The Hawesville Clarion says:—Every small town has its clearing house of gossip. That this town is no exception, we would impress on all. To be banded from tongue to tongue by these vile sharks—these filthy mouthed assassins—is the penalty all must pay for the misfortune of living in a place so small that every citizen knows what every other has for breakfast. Not a kick at all, but only mentioned to show you that we are on to 'em.

The principles advocated by William Jennings Bryan do not look so alarming to the country since President Roosevelt has adopted and put some of them into practice. The President even advocates a reduction of the tariff. He has bent every energy and broken some of the commandments in an effort to regulate the railroads and restrict those sacred privileges that have allowed them to rob the people and assist the Standard Oil Company to crush out all competition. If it were not for being disrespectful to the President we should advocate an injunction to prevent him from "swiping" the remainder of the Democratic platform.

Hon. Will A. Young will entertain Gov. J. C. W. Beckham and wife, S. W. Hager and wife, C. C. McCord and wife, and Gen. Percy Haley in camp at Amyx Springs, Morgan county, this summer. This distinguished party will live in a tent, close to nature and to nature's God.—Morehead Mountainman.

There can be no question about it being close to "nature," but when we "used" around Amyx Springs, "Nature's God" was never thought to be very close to that particular spot.— Pikeville Philadelphian.

Senator McCreary delivered a very strong speech Tuesday in the United States Senate in favor of further regulation of immigration, one of the most important subjects before the country today, had one that is not receiving the attention it deserves. The rate at which the scum of the earth, the criminals and aborigines of the old world are swarming into the United States is alarming. It is lowering our standard of morals and intelligence. Anarchy and discord follow as a result of the influx of these degraded creatures.

Senator McCreary is a broad, noble man, a credit to Kentucky. He commands the highest respect in the most important law-making body of our country.

THE FARM.STRAWBERRY BALLS.

Make a good biscuit dough and roll it out a quarter of an inch thick; cut into squares, two and one-half inches; put a spoonful of berries on each square, bring the corners together, pinch, and place the balls on a buttered tin. Melt a tablespoonful of butter and the same quantity of sugar in a fourth of a cupful of boiling water, and brush the balls with it; bake in a hot oven, and serve with any preferred sauce.

Strawberries may be made into jams, jellies, preserves, wines, and the juice may also be bottled in an unfermented state.

STRAWBERRY CREAM.

Soak a third of a box of gelatine in a third of a cupful of water; when dissolved, drain and stir it into a half pint of boiling cream; beat the yolks of three eggs with a cupful of sugar and add to the boiling mixture a little at a time; heat it until it begins to thicken, then add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a cupful of strawberry juice; strain and set on fire until chilled and beginning to harden. Then add a cupful of whipped cream and whip gently until the mixture is of the consistency of spongecake batter; line the bottom and sides of a wetted mold with strawberries, pour in the mixture and set on ice until ready to serve.

USES OF RHUBARB.

Perhaps it is not generally known that the common garden rhubarb, or pie-plant, as many of us call it, is a valuable spring tonic. Here is a homely plant that we do not appreciate at its full worth. Perhaps we make a pie or two and then declare ourselves tired of it and neglect its further use. As a matter of fact, the tender, acidulous leafstalks is an excellent substitute for fruit in a season when fruit is scarce, and its "tarting up" qualities are unexcelled by any ordinary article of diet.

It may truly be called our first fruit of the garden, because it takes the place of fruit and is one of the earliest things on the market. Rhubarb might be a common article of diet all the year round. For the spring and summer seasons it can be made into a variety of pies and puddings, and for the winter season it may be preserved in the form of jam, jelly, butter, or canned, either alone or in combination with other fruits. Cut up into small bits and stewed, it forms an excellent "sauce" for supper, to be eaten with bread and butter. One of the objections given to the plentiful use of rhubarb is the amount of sugar called for to make it sweet enough, but it is worth the cost.

ALTERING PIGS.

"The fact that so many pigs succumb to the operation of castration, or suffer from tumors forming in the scrotum after removal of the testicles," states a report just received by the Department of Agriculture, "is largely due to carelessness and ignorance," says Dr. A. S. Alexander. It is a very easy matter to castrate a young pig, but just as easy to do it wrong. Most of the trouble comes from the use of dirty instruments and rough handling. The knife that is used for tobacco-cutting and is specially sharpened when the times comes to castrate pigs is apt to cause infection. It may be a suitable knife otherwise, but is dirty, and should be thoroughly cleansed before using. Boiling will suffice if that can be done, which is seldom the case. It is, therefore, best to immerse it in a strong disinfectant before use and after operating upon each pig.

The hands should be cleaned with a similar solution, and it is well to use it also upon the parts to be operated upon. As it is, pigs are often taken from a filthy pen and castrated without preliminary washing, and no provision is made to have them occupy a clean, disinfected and freshly-bedded pen after the work has been done. Pigs should be taken from a clean pen, or washed before operating, and afterwards should go on to a clean pasture-field or into a pen that has been specially prepared by scrubbing, disinfection and white-washing.

The next point is to make free incisions in the scrotum. Where small cuts are made, the wounds close too soon and retain blood or pus, and there is also a liability of the cords to become caught between the healing lips of the scrotal wounds which will surely be followed by the formation of tumors such as we have alluded to. The cords should be severed high, and where this is done and the scrotal wounds are large, there is little danger of tumor formation. Rough handling, and especially dragging upon the cords, increases the liability to tumor and also to ruptures. When a pig is found ruptured in the scrotum or castration time it should be left uncut or eas-trated by the "covered" method. This consists in cutting through the skin of the scrotum alone, and then enclosing testicles and their envelopes in clamps, which will cause the parts to slough off and leave the sac healed, so that the intestine cannot descend. The same end may be achieved by stitching the envelopes skillfully.

CANNING.

The points of chief importance in canning are the three following: First—Have the fruit or vegetables boiling when you can it.

Second—Fill the vessel to the very top.

Third—Make it air-tight by sealing or screwing it very securely.

The glass jars are ulcer for fruit cans are said to be better for vegetables. Fruit has been successfully put up in two different ways: By heating it in jars, or in a kettle and afterward pouring into the jars.

For the former method, fill the glass jars with fruit, adding a little water; set the jars in a dishpan half full of cold water. Set this pan on the stove and let it remain there until the water boils, which will gradually heat the fruit in the jars. You will have to replenish the fruit, as it will shrivel when it becomes heated. For instance, if you start with four jars, you will probably have to empty one to fill up the remaining three.

Before sealing the jars, pour in cooling water to fill to the very brim; then wipe the rims dry and screw on the tops tightly. One screwing is never sufficient. It requires at least three to make it secure. You must, therefore, screw the top on a second time, twenty-four hours after canning, and give it a third turn forty-eight hours afterward.

If you prefer the second method, eating the fruit in the kettle, you will find it more rapid. Pour a little water over the fruit, just enough to keep it from sticking. It is unnecessary to put any sugar in it, as this does not make it any better, and if the fruit should spoil it would be an additional loss to have the sugar thrown away. While the fruit is heating in the kettle, fill several glass jars with cold or lukewarm water and put them in a dishpan or a large baking-pot, half full of water of a similar size. The jars will become heated to time to receive the hot fruit. Fill to running over and screw tops tight.

Put your glass jars in a cool, dark place in summer, as sunlight penetrates the glass. Wrap thick layers of paper around the glass jars of canned fruit to keep out the sunlight. In winter, glass may require a warm place, as freezing will crack them.

There is one advantage in glass jars—you can watch the contents and see whether they are keeping or not. If you see any bubbles arising, open it immediately and use for dinner that day. In a few hours it will commence to sour. You might cook the fruit down into a jam if you take it in hand on the first appearance of a bubble; otherwise, throw it away. During the winter you can make preserves of your fruit canned peaches make delicious peach ice cream.

Strawberries, gooseberries, raspberries, dewberries, blackberries and huckleberries may be canned by observing the three fundamental rules we have laid down above, viz.: Can the fruit boiling hot, fill the vessel brimful, and seal or screw it perfectly air-tight.

You can get good tin cans or glass jars at any of the reliable merchants of your neighborhood, but be sure they are good before you go to the trouble of putting up the fruit. Test the cans by filling them with water setting them in a dry place several hours.

In this way you can determine whether or not they leak. If they do return to your merchant to be exchanged.

Get both sizes—the half-gallon and the quart. Use the former in very cold weather when it will suffice for two days or more, reserving the quart cans to use in the spring when fruits and vegetables cannot be kept open long.

Some housekeepers set apart certain days for canning, but it is better to can a little every day in the cool of the morning or immediately after dinner. In this way you accumulate a good stock of canned articles without flurry or excessive fatigue. As soon as you have about a gallon of tomatoes, more than you require for the table, can them.

When you are to put up a few cans, immediately after breakfast is the best time. If you are to eat on a large scale, take the afternoon, when the stove and the kitchen will not be pressed into service for dinner.

In the morning let the cans put on an extra kettle or pot of water as soon as she starts the fire. Have your tomatoes ready; pour the water over them as soon as it boils; cover them up. In fifteen minutes they will be ready to peel. Lift them with a spoon or fork. Lay them on a flat dish so they may cool rapidly.

As the cold of the tomato stains a brass kettle badly and necessitates constant scouring during the canning season, heat the tomatoes in iron pots, having the pots first carefully washed and free from all grease. The tomatoes are as nice boiled in iron, and it saves a world of trouble.

By canning either directly after breakfast or directly after dinner can these iron pots without conflicting the dinner.

After putting on your tomatoes to heat, get together all the things needed about canning so you may proceed without delay. Lay a newspaper on the kitchen table. Set the cans on it so you may not soil the table.

Hardware dealers keep canning cement so you will have no trouble in procuring it. Some of it comes in sticks, some in tin cans, and some in tapers. If you use the stick cement keep an old frying-pan for the purpose of dissolving the cement. Keep a pewter teaspoon to dip it up. Have a bundle of clean, soft, old rags to wipe the rims of the cans perfectly dry. This is one of the most important points about canning in tin.

When the tomatoes come to a boil lift them up with a tin dipper, so your hand may not come into too close contact with them. When you fill the can as full as it will hold, take a rag and pass it around the rim twenty times, until you are certain that it is dry, as the least moisture on it will prevent the cement from sticking. Press the top firmly on; again pass the rag around the rim; dip up a spoonful of melted cement and pour it from the point of the spoon into the rim of the can.

If you hear a hissing sound stop instantly, that is the sign there is some dampness about the rim. Dry it with a rag, or, if you have gone too far, set the can aside until the can cools. Then unscrew it. Heat the tomatoes again for a few moments. Dry the rim more carefully, seal up the can again. The cement hardens in a few minutes and is much more easily removed than when warm and sticky. If you are canning more than a few quarts you ought to have some one to help you.

Leave the cans in some accessible place so you may daily examine them for a week. If they keep that long you are secure. The sunlight has no effect on tin cans, but they ought not to be left where they are apt to freeze in winter.

The directions given for tomatoes will apply, with slight variations, to all vegetables. Corn alone is said to be beyond the power of an amateur to can successfully. I have kept it very well, however, by canning it half and half with tomatoes.

Tin cans can be used several seasons by a careful person. You should thoroughly wash and dry them as soon as you empty them, especially rubbing them just underneath the rim where the rust is most apt to appear. Then fit on a proper top. There is great diversity in the tops of different manufacturers. Lock up the cans until the next canning season. Do not keep them near salt or salt meat.

A REAL DAUGHTER OF THE REVOLUTION

By CAROLINE GEBHARDT.

Copyright, 1874, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Story opens on Ellery plantation. Both Carolina in that of American revolution. Col. Bessemer and British dragons arrive, and march to demolition of Miss Ellery's home in the absence of her father and mother who are away. During breakfast the officers are disturbed by firing, and an American officer comes through the lines and disappears in the woods.

CHAPTER II.—Storm delays departure of British soldiers, and Col. Bessemer quite willing to remain in the company of Miss Ellery. During dinner a strange man in black coat and caped with long coat, a dining-room and given Miss Ellery a note.

CHAPTER III.—British officers started by appearance of stranger, but did not recognize him. Capt. Worthington, who was once his captive. He was a British lover of Miss Ellery. That night the British were attacked at the Ellery plantation, and many of them killed and wounded.

CHAPTER IV.—Miss Ellery starts on a walk to her aunt, a patrician Capt. Worthington, who has just come to the road. They quarrel because of his slight attack on her parents at her home, which was made by him. He tells her that Col. Bessemer doubts of his engagement to her.

CHAPTER V.—Capt. Worthington presents Miss Ellery to him, taking him a seat for the time. They are anxious of being a party to the wicked plot.

Two months later Col. Bessemer and his dragons, among the effects of which was his brother, had visited his home during the presence of his father and mother.

CHAPTER VI.—Col. Bessemer proposes to Miss Ellery and to have his answer later—possibly when he has returned from a campaign against Col. Sanger.

CHAPTER VII.—A REVELATION.

Once on the road, Bessemer and his men put spurs to their horses and galloped at a lively rate. Scouts had reported that the enemy was resting not far off. Bessemer, riding at the head of his mounted dragons, the perspiration streaming down his red face, his eyes sparkling with impetuosity of victory, his well-polished boots held erect in the saddle with British military stiffness, looked like he was a combination of force and fire.

A turn in the road brought them in sight of a small lake. The trappers gave a shout of triumph, broke to Bessemer's ringing command. In the water were nude men, bathing and swimming and splashing along its edge, on the opposite side, were others, stripped to their waists, doing their "fancy" washing; while farther up the bank under such shade as the sparse cottonwood trees gave, were yet more, smoking or napping or eating. Most of them had their robes beside them and their horses stood by, but it walled them little.

Their cry of astonishment, chagrin and terror beat the hot air ere that of Bessemer's men died away. The naked swimmers in the water were cut down before they could escape. Across the stream with eager haste, yet with perfect order, went the British cavalry and took them. In vain did Sanger stand from his nap under cover of his carriage wagon, save the crowd here by his name, would not bind his arms as it was, and try to rally his soldiers. The day was lost and though the bugle sounded did not capture the British, as he had boasted he would, he failed in little else he set out to do, and indeed few save Sanger had escaped, not enough to warrant pursuit on that appalling heat.

The British returned the way they had come, exulting. Ever thoughtful of his troops, though he was to set out anxious to get back to the Ellery plantation and make that his sleeping place for the night, Bessemer perceived that the heat and the sharp, hard ride since dawn had put considerable strain upon his men, sood a large, comfortable-looking house setting some distance off the road, surrounded by a fine grove of trees. He asked, "Can you tell me, where, who lives yonder?" Methinks it is a good place for an afternoon rest. As they rode to or from, we shall become their invited guests, and I should like to learn which they are, that I may know whether to reward or command."

There were beautiful women in plenty, southern women with bright eyes, powdered faces and rich voices, dressed in the beautiful costumes of the day, the low-cut blouses, the flowing skirts, the hair waving over ears and caught by high, jewelled combs at the back, the pointed-toe slippers with fleshing buckles, the flirtations fans and embroidered handkerchiefs.

And as for the men, they were as gallant a lot as one would wish to see, the British officers smothered in red coats and gold lace; the civilians in lace-breeches, ruffled shirts and silk-lined coats.

"They are roses," the boy answered eagerly, "as loyal to our King as my own family, and they will make you a plaudly welcome. I am sure, as my people have." Bessemer believed that under the summer sun which already covered his cheek like rose a rich red wave of crimson.

"Alas, a sweetheath residing there," he thought, and with a sympathetic feeling turned his horse off the road and entered the gate, which stood conveniently open.

The house was not the imposing mansion the Ellery homestead was, but there was a warm southern welcome awaiting the intruders and a piece of news mightily to Bessemer's liking as well. A courier, riding hard to overtake the British commander, had likewise stopped three for rest, and scarce had the English colonel dismounted ere he handed him a dispatch from Cornwallis enclosing the news of Gates' defeat.

There were three daughters of the house, all of them vivacious young women, as Bessemer soon discovered. "Oh, how delightful," they exclaimed, when the contents of the dispatch became known: "two great victories in one day! think of it!"

"Not in one day, ladies," Bessemer replied them. "Ten. Cornwallis won his on the sixteenth."

"It does not matter; we hear of them the same day," the youngest insisted. "We assuredly should do there lurked a certain constraint, and he could well guess the cause. One lady, rather exceeding the age when it was fashionable to be found unmarried in those days, tapped the colonel on the arm with her fan as he was passing the bench where she sat.

"Tell me, dear colonel, how many prisoners did you take today? A marvelous number, from all I hear, and they do say you have a most mysterious one whom you have held in Mrs. Ellery's garret. Nay, they go farther and state that it is Jane's lover, Godfrey Worthington Poor Anne! It would go hard with her if I were to tell her Godfrey; they have been devoted to each other for so many years, though they say her stepmother will not hear of the match. Tell me"—she dropped her voice to a confidential whisper—"Is it really he you have?"

"Madam," Bessemer answered gathering himself together, "I know nothing of this Worthington of whom you speak, but I should say that the gentleman whom I hold as prisoner were more suited to be Miss Ellery's father than her lover, since he is a man fully 60 years of age, white-headed and gray-bearded. His name is Pierce."

"Pierce? Gen. Pierce? That horrid old reticent! the, how delightful that you have caught him. He is the very one who hung the tortes this summer."

"The very one, madam, and he shall pay for it."

He left her with a courteous bow, but his heart was not as light as when she had accosted him. What was this silly woman's chatter about a lover of Jane's? A Godfrey Worthington, forsake? Of course, there was nothing in it; and yet he must be sure.

The richest man in the world can not have his kidneys replaced nor live without them, so it is important not to neglect these organs. If Foley's Kidney Cure is taken at the first sign of danger, the symptoms will disappear and your health will be restored, as it strengthens and builds up these organs as nothing else will. Oscar Howman, Lebanon, Ky., writes: "I have used Foley's Kidney Cure and take great pleasure in stating it cured me permanently of kidney disease, which certainly would have cost me my life." Nothing More to Pay

That's what he said and further, he (Mr. Ebe Walter, of Clarksville Del.), said this:

The feature that I particularly like about my policy is that the longer I live the more I get, and that during the balance of my life, there is nothing more for me to pay. (From Washington Daily News, Nov. 21, 1872.)

The fact is that Fifteen-Year Distribution Policy, issued by The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York is a very interesting document. A yearly dividend,—increasing each year after the policy is paid up—a sum paid the estate, and options which make it almost like handing so much cash and yet keeping it for your heirs at the same time.

In writing for information about a policy or thinking what you would like to receive in cash at the end of limited payment period, amount you would like your beneficiary to receive in event of your death, and give your age.

MISS ELLERY MADE A STATELY AND HANDSOME FIGURE AS HER MAMMA GAVE THE LAST TOUCHES TO HER COSTUME.

Home Circle Column.

A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Better sweetness in the heart than greatness in the mind.

The radiant face, the noble form, the lady-like courtesy, the helping hand are jewels of rarer worth than diamonds.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Each recurring May is a reminder of the dark days of the sixties. The living today, who were on the stage of action forty-five years ago, can well recall those stirring moments;

times that thrilled the American people, both the north and the south.

The music of life and drum reverberated from every valley and hillside in our land.

It was then our homes were tested to the utmost, sending forth husbands, fathers and sons, and leaving wives and daughters to care for farm and shop, while they should be braving the storms of battle.

Those heart-rending times when grief was so deep no utterances could be given, endearing embraces without a word, partings with a signal only of farewell.

Truly those were stirring times that seemed then that memory must ever dwell on the sad and hallooed scenes. But with the fast passing years how we have outgrown them all, and 'tis well, for life would be unfit for the duties that ever await it. With most today the Civil War is hardly a memory. A few whose wounds were keenest may yet have the indelible impression, and often recall the trying days of the '60s, but the larger remnant are almost revert to them they are quite forgotten. But may we never so far forget that as each bright May of coming years we'll go forth with the first blossoms of spring and tramp the lowly grassy tents where sleep our fallen brave.

MINISTER'S WIVES.

In no profession does personal address and individual popularity prevail for more than in that of the minister.

In no other profession or vocation does a man's domestic relations so seriously affect his success.

The physician may be a thrice wedded widower in quest of a fourth wife, or an exemplary benedict, and not lose a patient as a result of these conditions.

The lawyer's life lies wholly within the walls of his office and the courtroom.

The merchant command custom according to the excellence of their wares and their clever way of putting them on the market.

A tailor who gives a perfect fit may be ever so ignorant or disagreeable he is sure of patronage.

Even poor bachelor Roger Jackson could not keep his husband out of the White House, nor recall fascinating Franc's Cleveland friend her.

It, yet a minister's wife can impair his usefulness, even to the utter destruction thereof.

The people have the right-hand when the pastor is a married man, for let him be ever so high-sung he'll bear much criticism, even to fault finding, before he will let the vagrants that carries his wife and babies.

Many times the wife feels confident that it is her own inability to please that leads to the trouble, and she feels compelled to either neglect her family or fall to meeting the various demands which fulfillment alone can bring to her.

Do what she may, let her be saint, seraph or diplomat; she cannot sustain him in his position when the wind of churchly favor veers.

A minister has little trouble in rearing a wife, for as a rule ministers are well educated, well mannered and well dressed, and their success in winning the fair sex is too patent to be argued, and how little the unscrupulous victim realizes the grave responsibilities which come with this alliance.

The young minister may be ever so popular with his parish before marriage, but so soon as he installs his new wife as mistress of the immense the complexion of affairs is changed.

His gentle partner may be nothing more than a timid shrewd stealing at his heels, yet this shrewd changes the perspective.

If she asserts her rights and persists in looking well to her household she is dubbed useless in the church, and if on the other hand she devotes her time and talents to the work of the church she is blamed for neglecting her family.

Her home affairs are discussed and handles by unclean hands and the sacred precincts of the minister's fireside are invaded by the unreinforced bodies, which infest grades and conditions of life.

To the woman of mortal mould to the needs and fancies of a church is beyond the ability of an archangel.

The idea seems to be that a model minister must have a model wife, and in too many cases the wife is included in the engagement which hires him, and such a contrast is surely iniquitous. What a private church member can do consistently with his duty to his husband and children she is bound to undertake and nothing more.

That she is or is not accomplished, should affect her husband's influence no more than if he were a lay communicant in the church to which she belongs.

The rule which makes the popularity won by her virtue ineffectual to snare him in the hour of need, should work both ways or not at all.

The mournful conviction that he for whom she would sacrifice ease and life itself, would after all have done better for himself and the Master.

Right here let us enter a plea for minister's children which some claim are the worst children in existence.

Many seem to forget that the birthright of these children is no freer from the taint of sin than is that of other children, and if those who are ever ready to plot out imperfections in the character of minister's children, would read the history of the human family, they will find that the perfect children die before they are old enough to become contaminated by contact with the common progeny of the race. As a rule minister's children are largely deprived of the society and guidance of their father,

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Capt. Clute Crawford, one of the most widely known river men on the upper Ohio, died at his home opposite Huntington Monday.

The U. S. Court of Claims has rendered decisions in favor of Capt. Williams, of Pike county, for $144.27, and of George Pinson, Jr., of the same county, for $208.60.

Grayson, Ky., May 22.—Charles Stamper, aged twenty-one, charged with being one of six men who attempted a bank robbery at Willard last October, on trial here today, was convicted and given nine years in Frankfort penitentiary.

York & Billings, of this county, landed eighteen fine rafts of timber at Catlettsburg during the recent rise in Big Sandy river. They will realize a handsome sum of money from the sale of the timber, as all classes of timber are now bringing good prices.—Ceredo Advance.

Freelan Lykens, deputy sheriff of Morgan county, passed through here today with Wm. Cottle, whom he arrested in Catlettsburg this morning. Cottle is badly drawn for a forgery on the Cannel City Bank, and Mr. Lykens has been on his track for six weeks. This is the bank of which Luke Powell, formerly of this city, is cashier.—Independent.

Owingsville, May 23—Press Jackson, of this county, for the past ten years United States Deputy Marshal for Eastern Kentucky counties, sent his resignation on account of too much hard and dangerous work. During his term he traveled continuously, destroyed hundreds of moonshine stills, thousands of gallons of spirits, made thousands of risks, had many bloody battles with moonshiners, killed one desperado and wounded several others.

Say, let us make an effort to get a good flouring mill for Graysen. Attorney Jefferson Hannah, of Sandy Hook, attended court here this week. His name is prominently mentioned with the judgeship of the 32d district. He is a learned lawyer, a clean man and would make a creditable Judge.—Grayson Tribune.

On last Friday at the plant of the Pike Collier Company, just east of Matewan, on the Kentucky side, Lee Hickman attempted to take the life of H. D. Gast, Superintendent of the mines.

Hickman was intoxicated and was raising a disturbance about the commissary of the company. Superintendent Gast ordered him to be quiet or get away. This angered Hickman and raising a shotgun he fired at the Superintendent. Fortunately his aim was bad and the charge carried away a part of the clothing on the right shoulder of Gast without doing further injury.

Hickman made his escape to Matewan and hoarded No. 7. The officers of Williamson were notified but the man was not in the train when it reached there. It is thought that he got off at some station between Williamson and Matewan and took to the tall timber.

B. Dixon passed up Friday with a nice drove of cattle.
